BIG ROUND-UP FOR NATIONAL BEEF WEEK

No, folks, this picture is not intended to mislead you into believing that grass grows on Los Angeles downtown streets. It's just to impress you with the fact that the weeks of April 21st to May 6th are set aside to emphasize the desirability of beef as a food for your table. Cattle growers throughout the West have had their difficulties during the past few months. 2,726 Safeway Stores located in 18 Western States are devoting their combined influence to stabilizing prices by stimulating consumption of beef and thereby bring more prosperous circumstances to the great cattle growing industry which is so vitally important to the prosperity of the West as a whole.

Safeway Stores Purchase Prize Winning Cattle

Sixty-two prize winning animals, among which were the grand champion steer, the grand champion lamb and the Chicago livestock show's reserve champion steers, were purchased by the meat department buyers of Safeway Stores, Inc., at the livestock and baby beef show held last week in San Francisco.

These cattle naturally commanded premium prices, but the purchase was made in line with the program of selling only meats of highest quality, to which the Safeway organization is committed. It was also generally acknowledged that such purchases encourage young exhibitors to raise livestock of better quality, exerting a wholesome influence upon the cattle, hog and lamb growers industries while at the same time facilitating the distribution of champion meats to Safeway patrons.

Scotty MacGreggor, World Wide Traveler, Visits Torrance

—at Narbonne High School

Scotty MacGreggor, old "sour-dough" of the Alaskan gold rush days, world traveler whose adventures in many lands would fill a couple of volumes, paid a brief visit to Torrance yesterday on his way to San Pedro, which he says he visited for the first time 65 years ago before there was any San Pedro such as it has grown to be.

Scotty paused long enough to sketch a few incidents in his colorful life for the benefit of the Herald reporter, including his experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese in Nagasaki during the Russo-Japanese war, where he was quartered in a good hotel and sent on his way at the end of his term of "imprisonment" with $100 in American gold as a present from his captors.

Moratorium On Mortgage Sales Held to Be Void

Superior Court Judge Holds Legislative Act Unconstitutional

Of interest to every property owner in Torrance, a decision was on file in Los Angeles superior court today holding that the moratorium act postponing sales under mortgage and trust deed foreclosures was in violation of not only the state constitution but of the United States.

The decision, handed down by Superior Judge Emmet H. Wilson, held that the moratorium impaired the obligations of previously executed contracts and was discriminatory. It is pointed out, however, that Judge Wilson's decision affects but one of several moratorium acts passed by the state legislature, and that it in no way concerns the 60-day moratorium on second installment of real property taxes which were to have been paid by April 20.

"Purpose of the act is obviously to prevent families from being left destitute by reason of losing their property for non-payment of debts," Judge Wilson stated, "but as the act does not protect all classes of people, it is held to be discriminatory. The entire business structure of the country has been based on the inviolability of contracts, and the constitution holds them to be sacred."
